Steven A. Altman

Senior Research Scholar and Executive Director of the Center for the Globalization of Education and Management
NYU Stern School of Business

Steven A. Altman is a Senior Research Scholar at the NYU Stern School of Business and Executive Director of NYU Stern's Center for the Globalization of Education and Management. Steve's research focuses on international flows of goods and services, capital, information, and people. He examines how cross-country differences and distances shape these flows, measures how they vary across countries and over time, and analyzes implications for business and public policy.

Prior to joining NYU Stern, Steve was a Senior Research Associate and Lecturer at IESE Business School in Barcelona, Spain. He brings to his research extensive experience consulting with companies on international and emerging market strategies across a variety of industries and geographic regions. He has also managed the development of several teaching and decision-making tools.

Steve holds an MBA from the Harvard Business School, an MPA from Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government, and a B.S. in Economics from the Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania.
